

CLASSICAL HOME OF THE YEAR continued

This residence, known as 'English Rose,' is a three-story, 18,000 square foot, symmetrical red brick Georgian Revival Estate. Built in 1929, the home's influences came from both eighteenth-century France and the American Gilded Age. The scope of this project included complete interior rebuilding of two thirds of the house to create a new entry and reception halls, construction of a main stair, master suite and bath, and a 3rd floor bedroom suite. A limestone portico was added on the west elevation with a stone balustrade railing at the second floor terrace. When the renovation began it was important that the home's original craftsmanship be honored and replicated. This project proves the point that good craftsmanship is not a thing of the past.
